Recently my son asked to tell him a funny story. And I immediately remembered the day when I was bitten by bees...

That May we were camping near a small village. There lived an elderly man who was running a bee yard on the village edge. The beekeeper didn't like tourists. Every day he came to our camp and claimed of noise that prevented his bees from gathering nectar.

It was the seventh day of our camping, and the elderly man had been terrorizing us for a week already, so I decided to take a revenge. That morning I made a crazy plan of stealing bees' cells from their houses. I thought that bees left the bee yard early in the morning, so their houses were deserted. So, I slunk to the bee yard, open the first bee house, but there was nothing in it; no cells, no bees. Then I open the largest house, and a huge cloud of bees rose over me. I didn't expect that. At first I lost my courage, but on the same instant I darted away and ran across the bee yard, then over the fence and across the field of two kilometres long towards the river.

Unfortunately, bees flew faster than I ran. I was all bitten. I had to stay at hospital for the rest of the holiday... My son liked this story very much.
