My vacation at the farm

Last summer, I visited the farm, that my grandparents own in the east. I really wanted to enjoy it, since it is my last vacation before half-eleventh grade. My mother wanted me to stay home and study, so that I can get out of my bad grades and get a chance to win the german olympiad for a scholarship at the university, I want to go to. I agreed to stay, because I knew, how much my mother would be afraid, if I would have to go to the army.

Although, the whole thing is very serious, my stubborn grandparents did not even want to hear a thing and forced my parent to let me go.

The trip was long and boring... I was prepared for it and used all the time I had, to study. It helped alot but when Ann, my grandmother, saw the book, she almost ripped it out of my hands and ran away with it, to hide it in her room. Well... so much about studying. After loosing any hope of getting a house to study anything at all, I started to think about what I could be helpful of: I helped John, my grandfather, clean all the cow dung, which he could not do by himself, because his back is to weak. It sure was not fun and the smell was horrible, but the more was it rewarding to have a big meal and lay in the grass, on the fields, afterwards.

I realized, that living on a farm is fun. When I had to go back home, I wanted to lay in the grass once more... and I jumped over the fence to the field.
I broke both legs. Recovery time: three years.
So much about army...
