Mike Brown was a university student who studied computer programming. He was talented and studied well. He also interested in history. That's why he wanted to invent a time machine. He spent all his free time working with this and several months later he built it up. Mike wanted to get to the past. His lifetime dream was such as knight tournament. His professor and friends warned him that he could stay in the past and would never come back. But Mike didn't trust them and believed in himself. One day he made a mistake and everything was unbelievable and then Mike arrived nowhere. One minute later he saw a lot of people, who were wearing unusual clothes. These were knights. They looked such in the Middle Ages. At first, Mike thought that they were shooting a film, but when one knight addressed him, Mike understood everything. It wasn't a film. He was in the "middle" of the Middle Ages. Mike immediately pulled out his mobile phone to make a photo. But this knight thought that it was a threat, grabbed a sword and ran to Mike. Mike didn't waste his time and rushed away. But the knight couldn't run fast because of his armor. Then Mike saw a fence, closed his eyes and rushed away and jumped over it. One minute later he saw his room where he was holding a red flag. Then he remembered where he had taken this flag. Mike understood that his time machine was working and he said to himself: "It's working! And this red flag is my proof and tomorrow I will show it to everybody!"
