It was a very sunny day. Me and my brother were in the park. Suddenly we saw a group of teenagers jumping over the fence and I remembered a funny anecdote that happened to my friend Ernest. My friend was a very naughty and restless child and he often made his parents angry.

Ernest used to spend his summer holidays with his grandfather, who was a very strict person. One day we were playing football in the yard, and Ernest kicked the ball with so much strength that he broke one of his grandfather's windows. His grandfather got so angry, that he grabbed a stick and ran out of the house and after Ernest. Ernest got frightened and rushed forward to escape his angry grandfather. The old man understood that he wouldn't be able to catch the boy, so he got on bike and rode it quite fast.

My peer friend didn't want to be punished, so he decided to run to the field, getting over the fence as fast as he could. Just as he jumped over the fence he twisted his foot and fell ~~to~~ down. So his grandfather rode to him and helped to get up. Then the old man dragged him home and gave him a cup of hot tea...

When we meet with Ernest, we always remember that day and his beloved grandfather.
