Few years ago my best friend decided to ~~steal~~ steal a list with marks in order to correct his own and I agreed to help him. He said that he couldn't stand the bad marks anymore. He had tried everything, he had even tried using cheat sheets during our tests but it didn't help at all. We both knew that our teacher always left the list in one of her table drawers. So, once we made up our minds, we set the day "X" on which the whole operation was going to be held. To be honest, I was feeling <sup>quite</sup> unconscions and doubtful about the whole idea, but the sense of adventure was pushing me forward.

Finally, the day "X" came. The plan was to wait for the teacher to leave the classroom, get inside, take the list and silently vanish. So, it all was going perfectly fine until the very moment we opened the drawer, the list was supposed to be in. It simply wasn't there! And, to make things even better, once we realised the obvious fact of its absence, suddenly the door opened and our teacher walked in holding the list itself in her hands. You can only imagine the expression of her face seeing us two in front of her table with all the drawers opened.

Thankfully, we managed to get away with no problems. Anyway, it was quite a terrific and entertaining experience I will never forget.
