A trick of the destiny.

Once upon a time I had a Maths exam at my school. It was the year of 2014 and I can ~~definitely~~ say ~~it~~ was the worst year in my life. I was under the pressure of my Maths teacher, who hated me really. Every day she shouted at me: "You will never pass the exam, you are so irresponsible and lazy!" And I ~~really~~ wasn't ~~understanding~~ ~~anything~~. Speaking about me, I have always been a good pupil: I never played truant and never got detentions, ~~never~~ never used any cheat sheets and worked hard. But Maths wasn't my cup of tea, that was for sure. In spring I spent hours doing different tests ~~and trying to understand~~

~~Unconsciously~~ That was the period of ~~my~~ losing my self-esteem <sup>and</sup> hope. ~~and I was in a state of~~

The night before the exam was the most nervous and scaring <sup>night</sup> in my life. ~~My~~ Although my mom told me to go to bed, I could not stop doing tests. Approximately at 3 p.m. I decided to go to bed, and there was only one test left in my preparation book. I decided doing it and that was the biggest mistake in my life. Of course, I couldn't know ~~that~~ that.

The atmosphere in the class was terrific on that day. When I got my test ~~at the exam~~, I recognized it. It was the last test in my book! If I had not refused to do it, I would have got an excellent mark! I was so disappointed that I was ready to cry right in ~~the~~ class. I passed the test, of course, but I would never forget how the destiny played a trick on me.
