There was a girl ^{named Sarah} in Marc's class, whom he liked since the 5th grade. Unfortunately for Marc, his affection wasn't mutual. Despite that, he never gave up hope to at least become friends with her.

One day Sarah came up to Marc and asked him to help her with an up-coming test on English literature. Marc was over the moon and agreed without hesitation. Only after did he realise that Sarah ~~wasn't~~ wasn't asking him to study with her, what she wanted was Marc to write the test instead of her. This could have meant detention for a month, if anyone found out. However Marc had already given his word and could not refuse.

So Marc fulfilled his promise he did his best on the test and signed his answer sheet with Sarah's name, whereas Sarah wrote Marc's name on hers. They managed to hand in their works without anyone noticing ~~that~~ how they had cheated and left the classroom feeling relieved.

The next day their teacher announced ~~the~~ ^{the} results of the test. However Sarah and Marc did not hear the number of points they got, instead they heard an invitation to stay after the class for a talk with the teacher. Marc's heart was pounding and his palms started to sweat because he knew that his school had zero-tolerance policy towards cheating. Though, he was surprised when Sarah took all the blame. The teacher was in a good mood that day, so the punishment he chose was Mark helping Sarah ~~with her studies~~ to prepare for the tests until the end of the school year, ~~which~~ ^{which} did not sound like a punishment at all for ~~neither~~ ^{neither} of them.
