Middlen talents

In any class ~~there are~~ there are top pupils and dunces, ~~with an exception~~. In my form I have a classmate Alex, who usually plays truant, or when he at last comes to classes, he yawns all the time. Now it's our final year, so we have to pass exams, one of which we have successfully passed. It was called the final composition and I want to tell you one story.

It was the composition day and everybody felt anxious, apart from the fellow Alex, who was on the point of using cheat sheets as he had always done. But hardly had he comes to the auditorium, he was told to hand in ~~all~~ his leaflets. At first, ~~he~~ <sup>the fellow</sup> he was reluctant but then ~~got a great idea~~ ~~and decided~~ & promised not to use cheat sheets because he had been dreaming of being a journalist and realised he should challenge himself. and see if he was really a dunce and wasn't able to pass his favourite subject. He pulled himself together and made his best <sup>without any help</sup> for the first time in his life. Alex enclosed all his soul in that work and thought profoundly about the offered topic.

The next day, when all works had been checked, Alex's teacher asked him to call ~~on~~ after lesson. Alex was upset as he decided he would be given a detention as usual and would have to account for his awful composition. But he was surprised because his tutor said, "Your composition is terrific. It's apparent you've cheated!" <sup>But</sup> Alex was at a loss and started to assure the teacher, "This work was written by me, our supervisor took away that sheets." "So", rejoiced the tutor, "you've surpassed yourself. You're accepted to the University without additional exams."

I think his story teaches everybody not to be afraid of doing something your own as we all have hidden talents that are to be opened.
