I want to tell you about one episode from my school life.

This story happened one year ago in the end of my tenth year at school. It was a sunny spring day. Our class was sitting on the lesson of literature. We were going to have a test, so I had got ready at home.

"Turn off your phones and give them to me," our teacher said. Everyone sighed. We had only twenty minutes to deal with thirty questions.

But I felt relaxed and confident because I knew everything. I had already ended the test when suddenly I felt like someone punched me in the back. I was my classmate who didn't know how to answer the questions. I whispered that I wouldn't help him. But he was stubborn. A small piece of paper fell on my table. I was in panic.

Eventually, our teacher noticed it and came to my desk. "What is it? A cheat sheet?" – she asked me strictly. I tried to tell her that it <sup>was</sup> not mine, but she didn't listen to me, took my test away and put me an "F" for it. I was nearly crying.

But suddenly my classmate said: "It's not her, it's me. I <sup>who tried to cheat</sup> asked her for help". I was shocked. It was terrific! I didn't expect him to be so honest! Teacher listened to him and corrected my mark.

And that's how this story ended.
