So, you want to hear a story, do you? One full of adventures, friendship or love, dangers and beautiful? Well, too bad, because I'm going to tell you about how I was in high school!

Long time ago, in a not so far school, I was trying to cheat my way through the exams. I'm not a studying type, let me tell you. Never was. After all, there's a reason you can't spell "studying" without "ying".

So there I was, exams looming over me, scared I was like a duck during a hunting season. But my classmate, Johnny, a big fan of playing truant, by the way, came up with a brilliant scheme.

- We are going to make a cheat sheet, right? - He told me, ~~excitedly~~ <sup>cheerfully</sup> - and we are going to pass it along the class. That way, we all are going to get straight A's.

– That's dumb – I answered.

– You're dumb – almost shouted Mary.

– Remember that time you tried to cheat and Mrs Callahan caught you?

– Yeah, she called me a dunce, that old hag!

– Well, that's because you are a dunce. – I smiled – Now, if we are going to cheat...

– Cheat? – A voice, so loud, I thought god himself was against us cheating, interrupted me.

Slowly, I turned my head and saw Mrs Callahan standing behind me.

– Terrific, looks like I caught two cheaters. – She grinned like a Cheshire cat – Oh, excuse me, a cheater and a dunce. Two weeks of detention for both of you!

She turned around and walked away, like a lion walks away from a killed and eaten prey.

Moral of this story? No I see, don't discuss your plans in public, I guess, there's your moral.
