Tests always have been a problem for me. I don't like studying at all, so of course I've spent the night before the test playing games. The most I've done was making a cheat sheet. I tried to pull my favorite trick and play truant, but my mum is so used to this kind of situations that she just chuckled and said "I'm not stupid, wake up." I groaned and glared at her. I threw my uniform on and started my books.

When I came up to the school gates,

my friend Daniel waved at me.
"Hi" he said with a grin. "You didn't study at all?" I snorted. "Of course, why would I study when I don't even get scolded for getting bad marks." He squinted at me but kept silent. There was tension in the air and I couldn't figure out why. He said something like "lucky you" under his breathe. I pointed at the entrance with my thumb suggesting to go in. Deep inside I thought that this test was terrific since it was an important one. I ~~don't~~ like studying because things easily slip my mind. I once got yelled at for being unable to define "dunce" and got a detention. God, I hate being put in detention. ~~I'm a free soul and I won't think about my "behaviour". I don't care.~~ We entered the class and were greeted by ~~our~~ our friend James. He said "no" before I even asked for help. I got ~~to~~ to my sit, filled with dread and waited for the bell to ring. But ~~after~~ nobody came in when it did. A few moments later, our biology teacher showed up and announced that the class was cancelled since the teacher fell ill. I've never been so happy in my life.
