The Cave of the Dead

Last summer my friend and I decided to spend our summer vacation in Georgia. We had been dreaming of visiting the country for the whole year. We saw a lot of beautiful sights and heard a lot of terrific about this wonderful country. One of them made us feel terrified, it was about the place called Dead Cave.

Although we were scared we made up our mind to get there. On Friday the 13th we set off. The day was gloomy and so was the cave. Before we entered the cave, my friend said to me: "I have just seen a ghost". I didn't believe him because I thought that ghosts were unreal. They just can't be in our life, real life! We worked out a plan how we would explore the cave.

When we got inside we saw nothing special, only something huge and black. It was an ~~ancient~~ ancient grave and there were many of them as we went deeper into the cave. There was nobody in the cave or ~~so~~ we thought so. The farther we went, the colder and darker it got. I saw one of the graves half-open. I said to my friend: "Let's open the tomb and see what is inside it". The moment I opened the grave we both got realed and saw a ghost. There was something absolutely uncanny about it. We couldn't make a move but we both realized that cuttling was ^{it was} the only possible thing in this situation. When we got out, ~~pouring~~ and it was a sigh not to come back again.

We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson: people mustn't open graves.
