Last year, I decided to go on a boat trip with my friends. We ~~found~~^{used} the ~~day~~^{date} quickly – it was Sunday, and weather was supposed to be fine, so we grabbed some food, fishing rods and set sail. We ~~had~~ been sailing for about 40 minutes, and there was no sight of clouds in the sky.

Suddenly, the wind got stronger, and after a while we found ourselves in the middle of ~~the~~ storm. Giant waves were throwing the boat in all directions, but then the most terrific one threw us on the shore. Besides, our location wasn't recognized by any of us.

Scared, soaked and nearly hopeless, we decided to push the boat back. This process took us about five hours, and in that period ~~we~~ one of us decided to fish. But his attempts were in vain – fish ate the bait before he could reel it in. Finally, after such hard work out, we managed to push the boat back into ~~the~~ water, and set off towards home. Shining with joy, we were discussing our short trip and making witty remarks about it:

- Such an uncanny valley that stop was, eh?
- Yeah, and if it hadn't been for all of you, we would still be stuck there, – I said, – good thing I decided to bring you guys with me.

We stepped ashore in no time, and thus our scuttling voyage was over. We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
