Do you like winter? Personally, I don't and now I hate it even more.

Last Monday my friend Ann suggested going to the mountains, she said: "Oh, come on, guys! It'll be fun! I promise." Well, never ever believe that girl. We packed our things and went to the nearest bus stop to get to the shoe of the mountain.

At first the weather was nice: the sun was shining brightly, it was chilly. We were all thrilled and excited as noone has ever hiked in the mountains before. As we were going up, things started to turn worse. I'm not a fan of working out so it was very hard for me to continue walking. Plus the weather closer to the summit was terrific: the wind was strong and extremely cold. As unexperienced hikers we forgot to pack enough warm clothes, that's why everyone was almost freezing to death! And again Ann said: "Guys, don't worry! I have everything under control." Oh, boy, she did not...

We were scuttling through the snow exhausted, hungry and cold. At one point I fell on the ground uncanny to continue walking. We decided to return home. It was an "interesting" experience after which I caught a cold. The moral of the story is: never believe Ann and prepare properly before you try something new.

We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
