Going camping

It was a sunny morning in June. My friends and I were wandering around our village thinking of what to do. ~~My~~ Alice, Any and I lived nearby and had been friends all our lives.

We had been bored out of our minds all morning until Alice, the most adventurous of us, ~~was the first to suggest~~ came up with a terrific idea and said, "Let's go camping!" At first we reeled from the idea as our parents didn't allow us to go far from the village. After giving it some thought we decided to bite the bullet.

We quickly packed the essentials and set out on our journey. The quick scuttling to the forest was like a work out before the real adventure. When we got there the smell of the ~~the~~ trees, the mysterious sounds mesmerised us. We were even more thrilled to see a river that bore an uncanny resemblance to the one described in a fairytale ~~we~~ we had read.

After having a picnic by the river we lay on the big blanket, looked at the sky and talked. The atmosphere was so cosy and we were so tired that we dozed off shortly. I was waken up by Any shouting, "Get up! It's pouring!" We were surprised by the sudden change of weather and the rumbling of thunder made our blood run cold. We started panicking and even quarrelled for a few minutes in the rain.

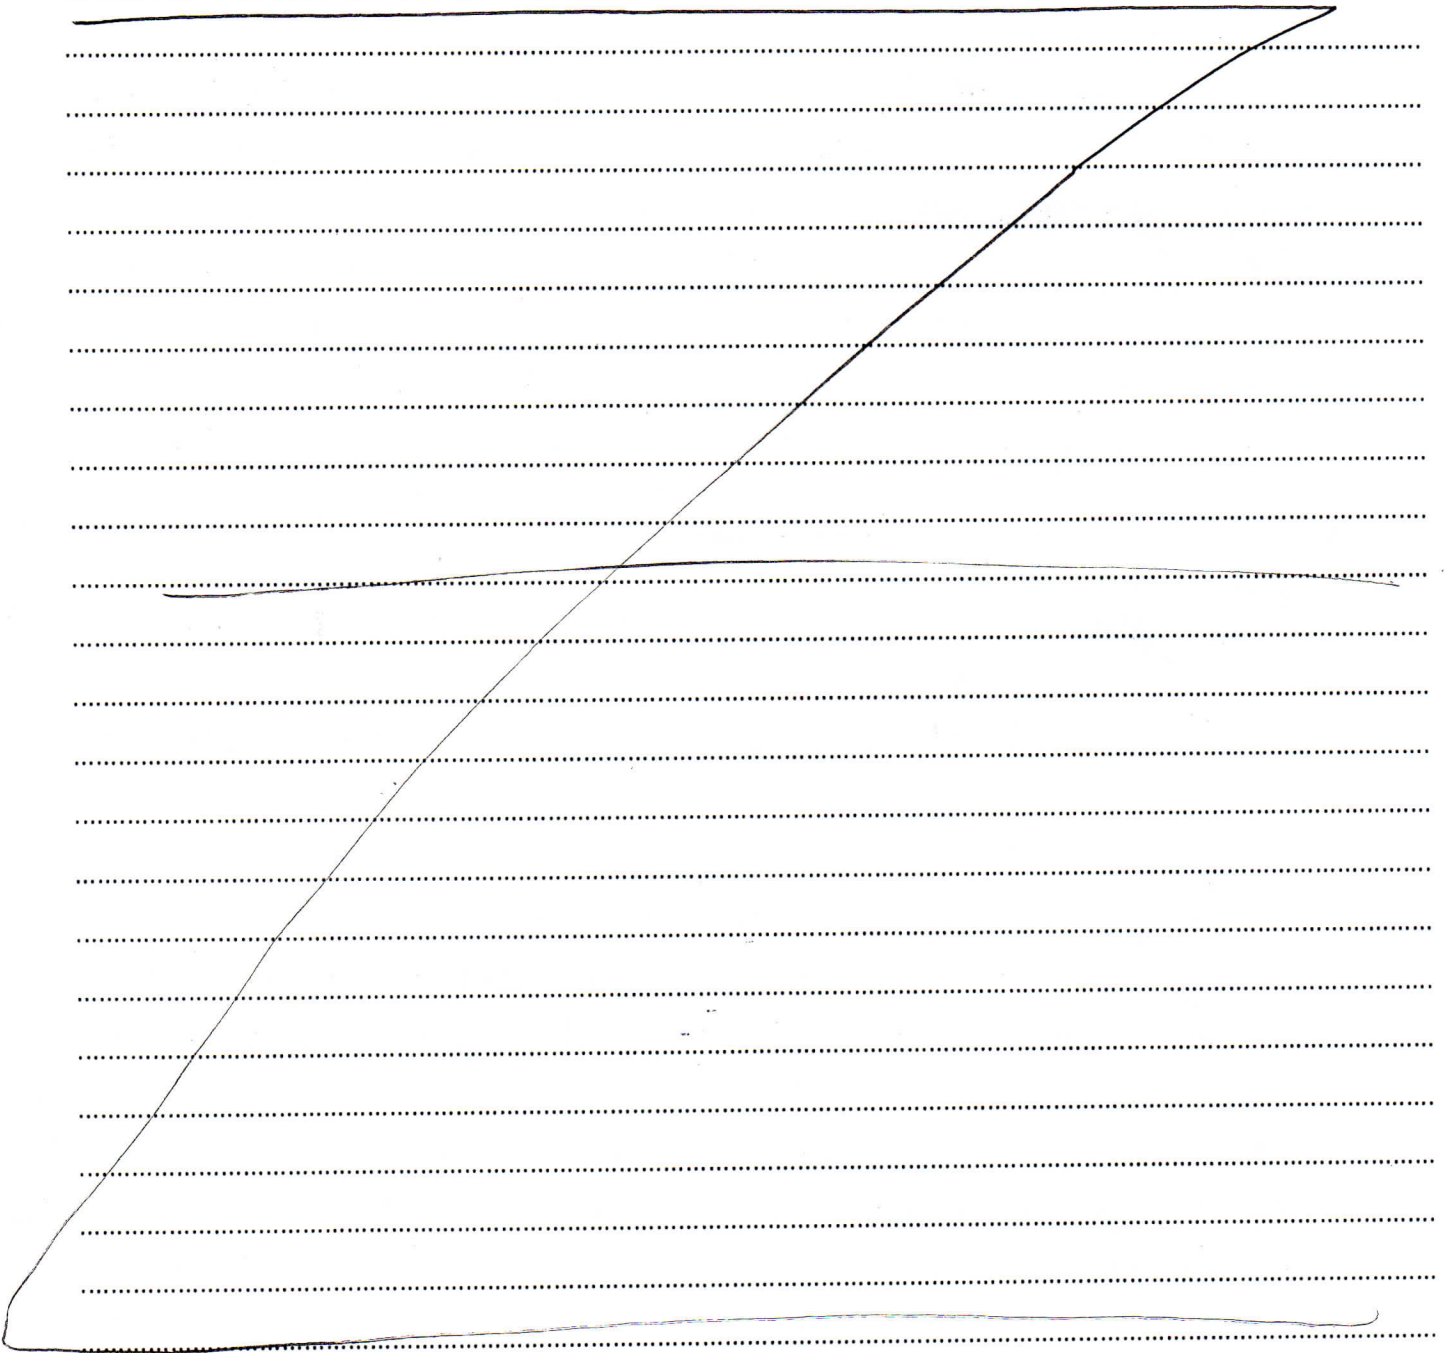

In the end we understood that it was important to keep calm and stay together. We drilled our brains and remembered the path to our village. We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
