Once, when I was in ^{the} ninth grade a funny story happened to my best friend and me. It was a beautiful spring day but we had to go to school, as we had a mock exam that day.

Emma - my best friend - wanted to play truant and not show up for school. She said to me: "Nobody will notice ~~about~~ that we are not at school. Let's go to a music festival instead!". I thought that missing a mock exam is not a big deal so I agreed to go to the festival. Now I see that it was an uncanny decision.

We met a few blocks away from school and decided to take the bus to the place where the festival was being held. It took us an hour and a half to get there but it worked out fine. I was feeling anxious and scared of ditching school, but still excited about the event, because my favourite singer was ~~going~~ releasing his new song. ~~He~~

The experience was terrific until clouds started to gather around and the sun went away. And then... my Mum called me yelling: "Why are you not at school?! You will be grounded for a month!" Everything was going downhill ^{and} it started raining heavily and we scuttled home. It was a horrible journey home and we promised each other ~~not~~ never to ditch school again. We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
