A lesson

My friend Mike liked to show off and often told us that he was a pro fisherman. So, once we set off on a trip. We wanted to have fun, but above all, the main goal of this trip was to settle the dispute and see if Mike really was a pro fisherman or he was pulling our leg.

Searching for the river we could not get without a map. However, after several squabbles about where to go he suddenly grasped it and threw away. "You hinder me! I will find the right way without this useless paper!" - Mike said annoyingly.

Finally, we arrived at the bank of the river. It was Mike's shining hour. Of course, we felt his tension. Moreover, when he cast his line I had an uncanny sense that something bad would happen. However, now it was just the matter of principle. We waited for fish for several hours and when it emerged Jane and I wanted to help Mike. When we saw his absolute embarrassment I started to cry. "Reel out more line! The fish is getting away and may break it!" The thunder struck and Mike fell down on the ground. It was bucketing down and we were scuttling for cover. Owing to this terrific storm it was not till the next morning that we reached our home. Mike's plan to fool us did not work out. So, we got back home; ~~impaired~~ cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
