Use of English. Task 3. Items 1-15

Born on 30 November 1874, in  , Oxfordshire Sir Winston Leonard Spencer-Churchill was of rich, aristocratic  . The young Churchill passed an unhappy and sadly neglected childhood, redeemed only by the affection of his devoted nurse.

As a student at school, W. Churchill performed poorly in  every subject except history and English composition. He was particularly inept  foreign languages. In a  , he described taking a two-hour-long Latin test that he left completely  apart from his name and the number of the first question, along with "a blot and several smudges."  achieving such poor grades at school, Churchill's early  with militarism saw him join the Royal Cavalry in 1895.

W. Churchill's political career started in 1900. Throughout his life, he held nine different government offices, became Prime Minister twice, and was called the "Father of the Nation". Such a personality is indeed  of admiration. Today there's a statue of W. Churchill inside the  (aka The Houses of Parliament).

Alongside with a brilliant military career, Churchill was a versatile personality. He was very artistic and creative – being a/an  painter, a journalist, and an author throughout his entire life. He never thought of himself as an artist and  landscape painting was just a hobby.

Churchill was a novelist as well. His first book was about his adventures as a war correspondent and military officer. He later  penned a biography of his father, a biography of the first Duke of Marlborough, a history of English-speaking peoples and a novel.

Winston Churchill was happily married. He met Clementine Hozier, the daughter of the London  nobles in 1908 and married her at once. Clementine became his best friend and main political  since Churchill made important decisions only with her approval.

Churchill had a successful and eventful life. He died in 1965, and was honoured with a state funeral.
