That was a simple day, nothing unusual was happening when suddenly Richard knocked on my door. I wasn't surprised to see him, but what truly shocked me was his offering. He said "Let's travel somewhere, go towards the unknown". We've been good friends for a long time, so I couldn't say no. We chose mount Everest as our destination.

Obviously ~~we~~ before setting off, we had to go through different stuff like working out, learning about the location we were going to travel to and being advised by experienced travellers. At last, we were ready.

But we set off climbing the mountain only after we had found the guide, her name was Miranda. Obviously she said: "It's really dangerous, you both have to be sure you're up to the task". We were, so we proceeded with ~~our~~ our plan. As ~~were~~ we were getting higher, it was becoming more challenging. Once I nearly fainted, it became clear I wouldn't be able to make ~~it~~ it to the top. Richard had to choose between stopping for a night and waiting for me to get well or leaving Miranda and me behind. ~~Sadly, he chose the second.~~ He said: "We're too close to stop now, with you or alone I will get to the top". So ~~he~~ did, there was no hesitation, he just left. At the end end when he reached the top, he felt only sorrow and regret. Later, when he came back he told me about ~~the way~~ <sup>how terrible</sup> he felt and I forgave him, as I wasn't sure I wouldn't do the same thing if I were on his place. Eventually, we get back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson.
