It happened on Saturday several months ago. It was early morning, about 4 a.m., when I was playing guitar (I was working out to master some classical piece). And eventually I found out that I wasn't the only one who wasn't sleeping: my father walked in to the room and said "Son, get your rucksack packed, we are having a picnic today". I was quite shocked, to be honest, but happy at the same time - it's been a long time since the last picnic we have had.

And so our trip began. We packed our things, food and all the stuff, and sat in the car. We were heading to our favourite picnic place in the country, when I found out on the Internet that the weather was going to be really bad. "What?" - my father answered, - "No, no, I don't see any clouds. It's going to be fine, trust me". Several minutes later I understood that I had left my power bank at home. At this point of our trip I knew: it wasn't going to be the greatest trip.

But to my surprise, we were actually having a great time... the first hour. Because then the weather immediately changed: it became really windy and, as expected, it started to rain. And there was thunder, so it was quite terrific.

By the time we were about 2 kilometres far from home the car ran out of gas and we couldn't help it because our phones died, so we had to make those 2 kilometres home on foot, under the rain against the wind. We got back home in one piece: cold, drenched, but having learnt an important lesson, which is always to check the weather before going out for a picnic.
